KUDOS OFFICERS!

It may sound cliché whenever I say that the Singapore Police Force (SPF) safeguards the country so well that I can sleep and wake up safely every day. But that is the truth. We cannot deny that our officers have been working hard and will continue to work hard to maintain peace and order in Singapore. I always remind myself how lucky I am to live in a country with an efficient Police Force that strives to help the public solve cases as fast as they can.

I always feel proud of the SPF when my friends and relatives from overseas share, frequently, that they feel safe in Singapore and that they are free to walk down the streets with no worries. I will always reply, "That's because we give no chance to whoever breaks the law. If you are believed to be guilty, you will be charged."

However, there are also circumstances in which officers have to deal with challenging situations. Instead of being daunted, I have seen officers take it as a motivation for them to work harder to overcome the challenges.

In this issue, we share several cases that our officers have worked quickly and decisively to solve cases, from cases of theft at Pulau Ubin to a fire at Serangoon, this issue's stories will give you a good insight into our officers' crime-solving capabilities.

“FISHING” AT UBIN?

Far from the hustle and bustle of city life, Pulau Ubin presents a perfect ‘escape’ for Singaporeans who take the short boat ride to enjoy activities such as cycling, hiking or just simply enjoying the rustic nature of the island.

With its popularity among locals and tourists, the Singapore Police Force (SPF) keeps a close eye on the island. The responsibility of maintaining law and order on Pulau Ubin, as well as other islands in Singapore, falls under the Police Coast Guard (PCG).

Pulau Ubin is also a popular spot among fishing enthusiasts. While many visit the island for a day of fishing, there are some who makes the short trip from mainland Singapore for a different type of fishing altogether.

First “Catch”

A Friday island getaway with friends turned into a nightmare for a female student after she had her ‘Prada’ wallet stolen along with her handphone. She had $200 in cash in the wallet. She was at the beach and went into the water for a dip, leaving her belongings unattended.

The Bolder & Larger Second “Catch” – Five Days Later

While the case was being investigated, the culprits went for their second round of “fishing”. They broke into a locker and walked away with two wallets, two mobile phones and a camera belonging to a group of locals who had visited Pulau Ubin for some water activities.

Time To Reel The Thieves In

With two theft cases in a matter of weeks, PCG Investigation Officers (IO), led by Staff Sergeant (SSGT) Teo Ziqiang, stepped up their investigations to ensure that there is no repeat of such incident on the island. The IOs went through footage from every available Closed Circuit Television (CCTV) camera around Pulau Ubin and Changi Ferry Terminal.

Through the CCTV footage, the officers noticed a suspected culprit alighting from Changi Ferry Terminal on the day of the second case. With the help of officers from the Public Transport Security Command, the PCG officers managed to track down one of the culprits through his EZ-Link records as he had boarded a public bus to head home. Unfortunately, the culprit had used a stolen EZ Link card.

One month later, the IOs from PCG received key information from Jurong Police Division. A male student was found in possession of an iPhone 4S which was listed as 'wanted' property, similar to the one stolen from the first female victim. He recalled purchasing it through a 'Twitter' user at a price of $230.

Using the information retrieved from the 'Twitter' account, the IOs visited one of the suspects' residences and arrested him. Within 12 hours, with the help of the first suspect, PCG managed to track down his accomplice. Both suspects admitted to committing the crimes and selling the stolen goods to mobile phone shops.

Caught In The Net

Both of them have since been charged with two counts of theft pleaded guilty. They were fined $4,000 each after the Court ordered them to make full restitution to the victims.

This arrest sends a clear signal that no criminals can cover their tracks even if the crimes were done out of Singapore's mainland. On land or on the seas, officers from Singapore Police Force will ensure that all criminals are brought justice, through inter-divisional collaboration and information-sharing.

TAKING A GAMBLE

It was the evening of a day in late June 2013 when officers from the Clementi Neighbourhood Police Centre (NPC) received the first report. A male pet-groomer arrived at the NPC to report that two of his cash cards, with a total value of over $100, had been stolen on two separate occasions. He noticed that the cards in his vehicle's In-vehicle Unit (IU) were swapped with low-value cards. He then handed over the two "replacement" cash cards to the officer on duty.

Every Second Counts

The duty Investigation Officer (IO), Inspector Bryan Lim, wasted no time. He immediately proceeded to screen for all the transactions of the two cash cards that were handed over and waited for the results.

Soon after, IO Raphael Wun and his team of IOs took over this case and examined the screening results from the cash card company. IO Wun's analysis led him to deduce that the thief might be an active gambler

Tapping On the Community

With the above lead, the officers quickly worked on their next step. In addition to going through CCTV footage, they leveraged on the community to help keep a lookout for the male suspect. Officers gave the descriptions of the suspect to Singapore Pools' frontline counter staff so that they could observe customers during their daily counter duties.

This rapport with the staff of Singapore Pools bore fruit. Not only did one of the staff spot the suspect, he also managed to record the suspect's vehicle type and vehicle plate number.

This was the start of the breakthrough for the team of determined IOs. With the licence plate number, the officers proceeded to the company where the suspect worked at. A search was carried out in the blue lorry which the suspect was believed to have used during the thefts and four cash cards were found in it.

One Man's Mistake, Another Man's Gain

Upon further interviews, the suspect admitted that he preyed on the vehicles of other delivery drivers who had left their vehicle unlocked while they made a quick delivery. In addition, he also admitted to picking up cash cards that he found on the ground. All these cards were then used to feed his gambling addiction.

A Winning Partnership

With the community working hand in hand with the Police, the long arm of the law will eventually catch up with law-breakers. Kudos to the Singapore Pools staff for being alert, and to the officers who stopped the opportunistic thief in his tracks. 📷

Tips To Prevent Yourself From Being A Victim

- 🚗 Park in well-lit areas
- 🚗 Install an anti-theft system
- 🚗 Wind up all windows and lock all doors before leaving the vehicle
- 🚗 Remove valuables, including cash cards and electronic gadgets, from your vehicle, even if for a short while
- 🚗 Keep a lookout for suspicious characters in the vicinity before leaving. If you spot anyone tampering with other vehicles, take note of their appearance, attire, height or any distinctive physical features and contact '999' immediately for assistance

“HE RAN INTO THE BUSHES”

In the early hours of one night in May 2013, Jurong East Neighbourhood Police Centre (JE NPC) officers were conducting a roadblock at Boon Lay Way when someone riding a blue Kawasaki motorcycle came along.

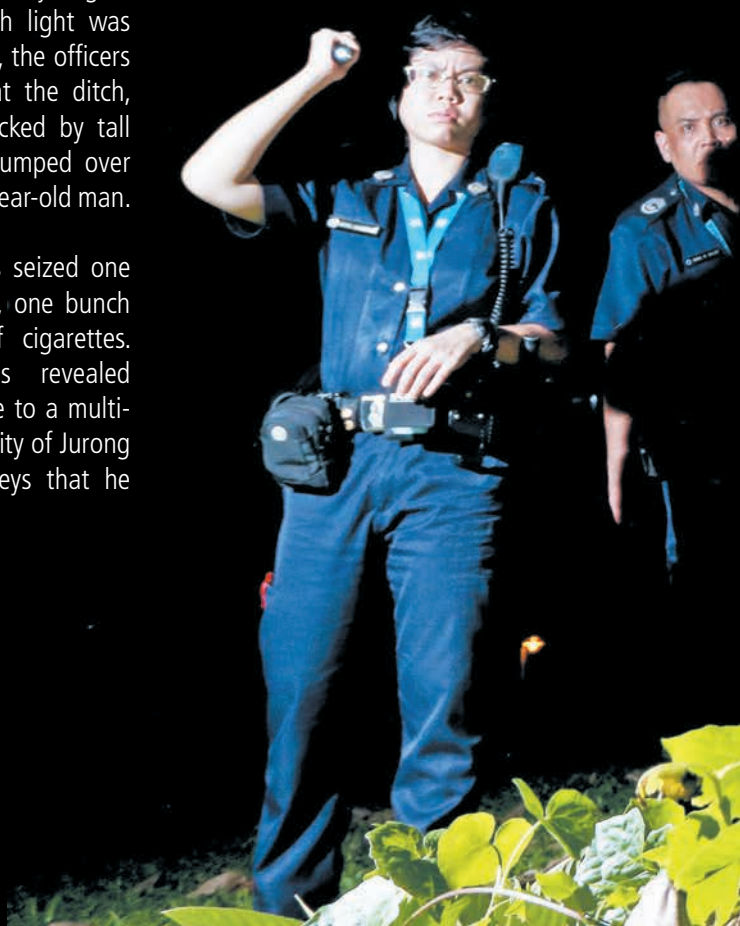

The road was quite empty with only a few vehicles travelling, it was thus quite obvious when the rider slowed down and turned off the engine at the extreme right lane. The rider pushed his motorcycle to make a U-turn and then started the engine. “That’s when I started to give chase,” said Sergeant (Sgt) Abu Hamid Bin Abu Shama. “My sense was that he was trying to get away from the roadblock. When I was speeding towards to him, he was still trying to turn on the engine. He looked in the rear view mirror of his motorcycle and saw me coming, so he abandoned his motorcycle.”

Coincidentally, Inspector Avtar Singh, a Team Leader (TL) in the NPC, and his partner were driving towards the roadblock location at that time. They quickly stopped their vehicle and joined in the chase. “That was when he (the subject) ran into the bushes,” said Sgt Abu.

It was absolutely dark. The officers contacted their Divisional Operations Room (DOR) for assistance and the Police K9 unit was activated. Sgt Muhammad Fadly Bin Hamzah, a K9 officer, who was activated to assist, shared, “I assessed the environment to see what we could do. I asked Inspector Avtar where the subject was last seen. He brought me to what looked like a big drain. I took out my torch light to assess if it was safe for my dog to proceed.” When the torch light was shone towards the bushes, the officers saw the subject hiding at the ditch, lying face down and blocked by tall grass. Immediately, they jumped over and apprehended the 24-year-old man.

During the arrest, officers seized one helmet, a pair of slippers, one bunch of keys and a pack of cigarettes. Preliminary investigations revealed that the suspect had gone to a multi-storey car park at the vicinity of Jurong West Street 62. Using keys that he earlier duplicated from unattended motorcycles, he stole the motorcycle and rode off without a valid driving licence. The culprit has since been sentenced to three years’ imprisonment and disqualified from driving for 10 years.

Tips To Prevent Motorcycle Theft

-  Park your motorcycle in well-lit areas;
-  Install an anti-theft alarm for your vehicle;
-  Use a motorcycle canvas to cover the motorcycle, securing both ends; and
-  Use additional locking devices such as disc brake locks and suspension guards

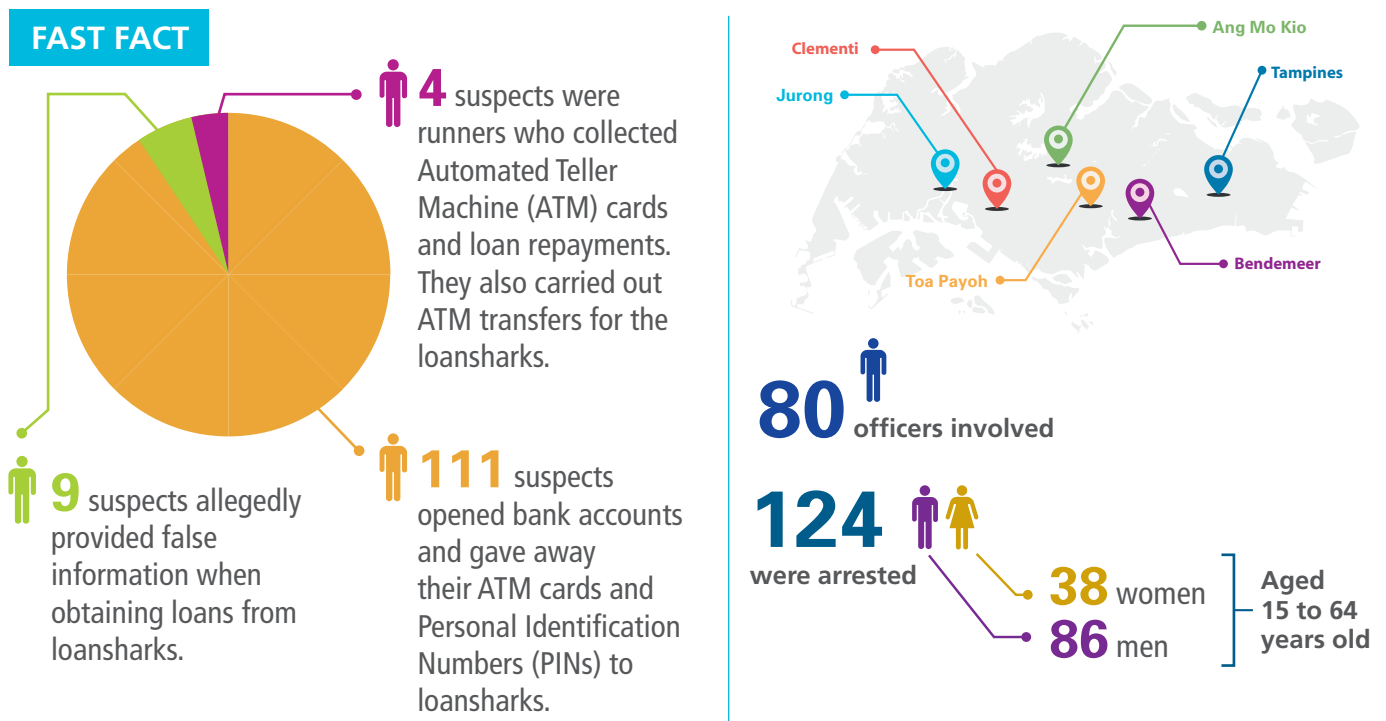

BLITZES IN NUMBERS

As part of its effort to make Singapore the safest country in the world, the Singapore Police Force (SPF) conducts large scale raids periodically. Some are multi-agency raids while others are carried out simultaneously at several locations. We take a look at some cold hard facts about two such raids conducted in January 2014.

LIGHTS OUT

It was no ordinary night in March 2010 for the officers from Bedok North Neighbourhood Police Centre and the Investigation Branch from the Bedok Police Division. It all started with the Police being informed that someone was lying on the pavement along Upper Changi Road East. The Police and the Singapore Civil Defence Force paramedics hurried to the incident location where they spotted a male body laying motionless. The victim was pronounced dead at the scene.

Senior Investigation Officer (SIO) Liew Pei Ting from the Investigation Branch was alerted after the victim was pronounced dead. Luckily, a witness had come forward with information that a man had carried the deceased and left the deceased on the pavement before leaving in a van driven by another man. The other vital clue that the witness provided was the number plate of the van.

SIO Liew and her team found that the van was registered to a maintenance company in Ubi Rd 1. They arrived at the office, looking for the two men the witness had seen in the van. It turned out that the van driver was not in office then, so SIO Liew proceeded to the driver's house. However, he was still nowhere to be found.

She then found out about the location where the driver was conducting a maintenance service. He was finally located and brought back to assist in investigations, where the truth began unravelling.

Since 2009, the deceased had been employed by the maintenance company on an ad-hoc basis to do repairs and restoration of water taps, lights and locks at various locations. On the incident day, the deceased was standing on a ladder, changing ceiling lights at a unit along Seraya Road when he fell. The accused carried him to his van with the intention of taking him to the hospital. However, the deceased refused, revealing that he was an illegal immigrant.

Along with the deceased's 'friend', the accused drove to two clinics where both doctors advised that the deceased be brought to the hospital. However, while on the way, the accused changed his plan, turned into Upper Changi Road East where the 'friend' removed the body from the van and placed it onto the pavement. They then left the scene.

It was no more than 12 hours from the start till the end of the investigations. Time is always of the essence when solving crimes, but in this case, it was thanks to the vital information from the member of public and the hard work of SIO Liew and her team that another lawbreaker has been brought to justice. Unfortunately, the 'friend' remains unknown.

PLAYING WITH FIRE

The Police are not afraid to get down and dirty. In the space of about a week, there were multiple cases of rubbish chute on fire, at Blk 108 Serangoon North Avenue 1.

Due to the alarming number of cases, the Serangoon Neighbourhood Police Centre (NPC) Crime Strike Force (CSF) Team decided to leave no stone unturned to identify the culprit and solve the case. The officers were specifically looking for items which could lead them to figure out the cause of the fire. However, every lead that the police got led them to a dead end. Without any basis, it was not feasible to narrow down on any of the unit occupants as the chute serviced a total of 22 units which left the officers with an immeasurable number of possible suspects.

The officers did not give up. They analysed the dates and timings of the fires as well as the possible modus operandi. Records of any past similar cases were examined and they tried to identify any known offenders who may be residents at the block. Based on their investigations, the officers mounted an operation to monitor the affected block during the 'crime-prone timings' which was between morning to late afternoon.

During the observation, the officers observed smoke coming out of the chute and immediately divided among themselves in teams and proceeded to different levels to have a vantage view of all the units serviced by the chute. The officers zeroed in on two units on the sixth and seventh floor and interviewed the occupants as suspicious movements were spotted. When they were on the seventh floor, the officers noticed the smell of smoke emanating from a unit. The officers' suspicion grew stronger when the occupant appeared nervous when they knocked on his door.

When officers entered the unit, the occupant avoided eye contact and kept peering into his kitchen area. Earlier, when the officers had checked the rubbish chute below the block, they had found remnants of burnt bandage, a Milo sachet and a piece of torn newspaper from The Straits Times. The officers noted that the suspect had a bandage on his leg, hence, were not surprised when they discovered a piece of bandage and Milo sachet stuck on the interior of the rubbish chute in suspect's flat. He also had The Straits Times with a missing page that matched the partially burnt newspaper page!

Commenting on the case, Staff Sergeant Sanjit, Team Leader of Serangoon NPC's CSF said, "We felt responsible for the safety of the neighborhood. We knew that if not kept under check, this spate of events could blow out of proportions and could even lead to loss of lives or serious damage to property."

Tips to adopt to prevent such acts of mischief from being committed

- 🔥 Avoid placing any flammable item(s) outside your unit or corridors.
- 🔥 Dispose unwanted items at appropriate rubbish collection areas.
- 🔥 Look out for any suspicious character(s) loitering around your neighbourhood. Take note of his/her appearance and contact the Police immediately.

FLASHES OF BLUE

Ordinarily, a playground would be filled with boisterous children and their caretakers, especially on an afternoon, in the middle of the heartlands. In September 2013 however, an unwanted guest appeared at the playground in Jalan Bukit Merah – a flasher.

Staff Sergeant (SSgt) Mohd Fadzly and Sergeant (Sgt) Koh Bao Bao from the Bukit Merah East Neighbourhood Police Centre were the first officers on scene. Sgt Koh shared that the pair's primary concerns were to "protect the members of the public" and to this end, they knew they would "have to distract the man from the members of the public, allowing him to focus on us instead."

Protocol dictates that when a suspect begins lashing out, officers should first issue a verbal warning to cease. However, the suspect continued to swing his arms at them. Sgt Koh radioed for back-up, and both officers drew their T-batons in self-defence.

Suddenly, the man charged towards Sgt Koh, who had no choice but to draw her Taser and deploy a round on him after a final warning, swiftly immobilising him. SSgt Fadzly then quickly moved in to subdue and handcuff him. Officers who responded to the backup call had arrived on scene by then and helped to take the suspect into custody.

Reflecting on the incident, Sgt Koh was fairly relieved that the incident was over quickly and without any major mishap. "Everything happened too fast. We're glad that we had great teammates [who] came to our assistance. I know that my teammates are behind me to provide the support."

It also helped that the training we received built up our confidence level. They were "able to use the right equipment for the situation to reduce harm to others and ourselves," said Sgt Koh.

More importantly, Sgt Koh said she and her teammates would "never let our guard down for any incidents...and are always prepared for the worst-case scenario so that we can handle the situation instantly."

Strong words indeed! It demonstrates the excellent training and mindset that our officers routinely carry with them onto the frontline. 🇸🇬

GAME'S UP!

Blurry footage of three youths loitering outside a Housing Development Board (HDB) flat the victim's unit, before one of them took the bicycle and left via the staircase. This is what my fellow officers and I from the Ang Mo Kio South Neighbourhood Police Centre Crime Strike Force saw when investigating into two separate cases of bicycle theft reported in Ang Mo Kio in December 2013 and January 2014. The stolen bicycles had been left unsecured outside the victims' units, but critical evidence was retrieved from the Closed Circuit Television (CCTV) camera installed outside one of the victims' flat.

The breakthrough, however, only came after sifting through almost a week's worth of footage from the Police Cameras (POLCAMs) installed at the block of flats.

The movements of the youths involved were clearly recorded. Initially, the youths were seen at the corridor walkway carrying just skateboards. After 10 minutes, the youths reappeared with two bicycles.

Seeing that the youths had exited the lift on the eleventh floor without entering the lifts from the void deck, we deduced that the youths could either be staying at the block or had arrived at the block via the overhead bridge link way. As the culprits looked very young, a quick check with all the primary schools within the jurisdiction of Ang Mo South Neighbourhood Police Centre did not result in any leads on the suspects' identities.

Not disheartened, we went back to the scene and conducted a walk-through of the scene once again. We decided to walk over to the area at the other end of the link way. A male Malay youth was spotted waiting at the bus stop just opposite the incident location. As the Malay youth was about the same age group as the culprits, we approached him and struck up a conversation. After getting to know that he is a frequent skateboarder, we decided to show him the footages of the culprits. The youth immediately pointed out that he knew the three culprits, of which two were his neighbours!

We verified the information with the culprits' school and their identities were confirmed. When we interviewed the culprits, they knew that the game was up and admitted to the theft of the two bicycles. The culprits led us back to their units, where a raid was conducted. Besides one of the stolen bicycles, we recovered two pairs of shoes, three fishing rods, one fishing reel and a fishing rod bag, which had all been stolen as well.

The other stolen bicycle was given to the culprits' acquaintance, only known to reside at a block in Ang Mo Kio. With no other details, we went to the block and searched floor by floor. The stolen bicycle was finally found outside a unit on the ninth floor. A check with the home owner revealed how the stolen bicycle ended up outside his unit. The bicycle was taken over by the police.

Upon further investigation, the trio was found responsible for seven theft cases. 🚔

- 🚲 Keep your bicycle inside your house when you are not using it.
- 🚲 Park your bicycle at a designated bicycle bay and secure all removable components with good locks.
- 🚲 Make unique permanent identification marks such as engraving your name, or affix the Bicycle Security Label on the bicycle frame.

PARTNERSHIP WITH THE PUBLIC

The Singapore Police Force (SPF) has always prided itself on its close working relationship with the public. With the public being the SPF's extra pair of eyes and ears on the ground, this partnership has played an integral part in ensuring safety and security in Singapore.

This partnership was clearly evident in an incident on 14 August 2013. Four members of the public assisted the police in the arrest of a suspect who robbed a pedestrian at knife-point at Serangoon Road. The four men had witnessed the incident, gave chase and apprehended the suspect. Their public spirited act was commended by Acting Commander of Central Police Division, Superintendent of Police (Supt) Tan Kuan-Wei.

In another incident on 10 November 2013, three 12-year-old students witnessed a case of theft along Lengkok Bahru and assisted the police in identifying and capturing the subject. Commander of Clementi Police Division, Deputy Assistant Commissioner of Police (DAC) Melvin Yong commended the students for their alertness which led to the arrest of the suspect. He added that this arrest represents yet another illustration of the strong partnership between the community and the SPF in fighting crime together.

These two incidents are examples of how the public assisted directly in apprehending suspects. However, the SPF has also benefited tremendously in their fight against crime through valuable information and feedback given by the public through its telephone contact points.

In addition, the SPF has also embraced the digital world including using online and social media as a platform to engage the community in a bid to keep abreast of the ever-changing new media environment.

Via the Police's Crimestopper Portal on its website, the public can provide information on any crime which does not require immediate police attention. Valuable information given by the public may be used to aid on-going investigations or uncover unreported crimes.

On the social media front, the SPF has more than 360,000 fans on Facebook, close to 18,000 followers on Twitter and over 6,000 You Tube subscribers. This high volume of social media interaction between the SPF and the Public has allowed the Police to appeal for information from the public on unsolved cases by posting pictures of suspects obtained from Close Circuit Television (CCTV) footage. To date, at least ten cases have been solved with the help of information given by the public.

To further strengthen the relationship between the Police and the Public, the SPF has launched several initiatives to engage the public. One such initiative is the Community Policing System (COPS).

A revamp of the Neighbourhood Police Centre (NPC) system which started in 1997, COPS is being rolled out in phases since May 2012 and has brought crime-fighting capabilities closer to the community with more officers on foot and bicycle patrols, thus increasing the interaction with the public on their concerns in safety and security related matters which are specific to the neighbourhood. The increase in the number of police officers on the ground will also enable them to be more involved in community projects such as safety and security programmes. Through these programmes, members of the public are also encouraged to be more involved in crime prevention initiatives.

Members of the public who are keen on contributing to the safety and security of their neighbourhood can volunteer to join the Citizens on Patrol (COP) group which has been established in many neighbourhoods to increase community vigilance under the Community Safety and Security Programme (CSSP). COP groups are trained by the SPF on safety, observation skills and crime prevention measures. They alert the police on crimes or suspicious activities which they encounter during their patrols. Besides the COP groups, the Neighbourhood Watch Zone (NWZ) was also set up to include all residents in the Residents' Committees, Neighbourhood Committees and Residents' Association zone. The NWZ was set up to encourage residents to get involved in crime prevention and detection besides as a means to develop a strong community spirit.

The SPF is constantly looking for ways to engage the public to complement the work of its own officers. Such a partnership is the cornerstone of a safe and secure Singapore.
