Nestled amidst a residential estate, Woodlands Division is the Singapore Police Force’s (SPF) seventh Land Division which was officially opened on 12 March 2019. With this new division, the SPF will be able to better serve the residents living in the northern parts of Singapore together with its network of five Neighbourhood Police Centres (NPCs) and four Neighbourhood Police Posts (NPPs).

"Woodlands Division, and the opening of this new building, is another important milestone in the SPF’s strategy. I would like to congratulate the men and women of this Division on this special occasion. But really, more than any physical infrastructure, it is really the spirit of professionalism of our SPF officers that is critical."

Mr K Shanmugam, Minister for Home Affairs and Minister for Law

Deputy Assistant Commissioner of Police (DAC) Leon Chan, Commander of Woodlands Division, shared that the toughest aspect in setting up this new police division was the human element. “We took over areas that were from Ang Mo Kio Police Division and Jurong Police Division, so we had to bring in two different kinds of practices to work together,” shared DAC Chan. Other than merging two different sets of practices, the selection of officers from other divisions was also carried out with the consideration of attaining a good balance of new and experienced officers from all across the Force.

The Woodlands Division is another example of the SPF’s ongoing efforts to enhance its organisational and operational capabilities to adapt to the ever-changing operating landscape. Despite the many considerations for the various plans, they are always done with the SPF’s vision in mind, to make Singapore the safest place in the world.

The 10-storey divisional headquarters with a modern minimalist interior is the first police division to introduce redesigned workflow processes and tech-enabled systems to enhance the provision of police services to the public. These changes allow police officers to deliver more efficient services to members of the public, who will benefit from shorter waiting times, more privacy and comfort.

For those who prefer the assistance of an officer, they can do so by taking a short escalator ride up to the second floor where members of the public can meet an officer in one of the many glass-panelled rooms. Not only will the public receive help in the report-lodging process, they will also be able to do so with more privacy and comfort.
Police Workplan Seminar 2019
- A Smart Force for the Nation

From Unmanned Aerial Vehicles (UAVs) to autonomous robots, the Police Workplan Seminar 2019 featured the latest advancements in policing technologies which will augment the Singapore Police Force’s (SPF) crime-fighting capabilities. Such advancements are also crucial for enhancing the productivity and capabilities of frontline officers in mitigating day-to-day situations.

Hundreds of police officers from various units attended the seminar, which was graced by Mr K Shanmugam, Minister for Home Affairs and Minister for Law. Let us take a look at the new technologies and gizmos unveiled this year!

Sky Aerial Response Command (Sky ARC)

The Sky ARC is the SPF’s mobile UAV response force that is equipped with a variety of advanced aerial surveillance capabilities. UAVs with different capabilities can be deployed from the Sky ARC to fit the surveillance requirements of different terrains. Aerial situational images and videos captured remotely by the UAVs can also be livestreamed back to the Police Operations Command Centre. With a centralised command and control and fleet management system, the capabilities of the Sky ARC will enable frontline commanders for better sensemaking and enhance their operational responses. Frontline officers will be trialling the Sky ARC for a year for incident management and pre-planned security events.

Smart Glasses

The SPF is currently experimenting with wearable technology such as the Smart Glasses. These glasses feature a powerful camera with automatic focusing capabilities and 3x zoom for video shooting. It also provides clear vision in all lighting conditions and can be powered up to 10 hours via a mobile phone. With its ability to perform real-time video analytics, Smart Glasses will enhance the operational efficiency of frontline officers. The SPF will deploy the glasses at major security events to validate their effectiveness in supporting frontline officers to fight crime.

JARVIS

JARVIS is a one-stop screening platform developed by the SPF in collaboration with GovTech. It allows investigation officers to comb through multiple police databases at a click of a button, taking only up to five minutes per search. Before JARVIS, searches for personal information of individuals were done through accessing many individual databases, taking up to almost 20 minutes per search. The new platform was developed and trialled between March and November last year, and is now rolled out to all officers from the SPF investigation fraternity.
Enhancing Robotic Innovations

To further enhance operational efficiency and capabilities of officers, the SPF has also worked closely with its industry partners to explore the use of robotics to automate routine tasks. Through robotic automation, SPF officers can focus on higher-value work such as crime prevention, detection and deterrence efforts.

Multi-purpose All Terrain Autonomous Robot (M.A.T.A.R.) 3.0

An enhanced version of M.A.T.A.R. 2.0, the new M.A.T.A.R. 3.0 comes in two variants, each with its unique set of upgrades. One variant, which was deployed at last November’s 33rd ASEAN Summit, has an extendable Pan-Tilt-Zoom Camera that can be elevated to a maximum height of two metres to provide surveillance. It also has a two-way communication feature which allows police officers in the forward command post to communicate with people on the ground.

The second variant has a tethered UAV attached to the robot. Once deployed, the UAV can fly up to 30 metres, providing a bird’s eye view of the surrounding area. The aerial surveillance capability will provide enhanced situational awareness for frontline commanders to make better decisions and enhance their operational responses. The effectiveness of this variant will be trialled at upcoming security events to assist in monitoring crowds.

Mini Autonomous School Talk Robot Officer (Mi-ASTRO)

Mi-ASTRO is a miniature humanoid robot which will aid the SPF in strengthening its outreach to preschoolers and students at school engagement talks. Through customised pre-programmed messages, Mi-ASTRO will help to better engage young audiences, improving the awareness and retention of crime prevention messages amongst them.

Impact Measurement Trainer (IMT)

The IMT is a new system which will enhance PDT training through the provision of immediate feedback to trainees to help them improve their techniques. Two types of manikins (standing and sitting) with force sensors embedded inside will be used to measure the intensity and location of the strikes by trainees when they execute PDT techniques. The information on their strikes will be immediately displayed on a video panel, allowing the trainee and instructor to examine the quality of the techniques applied. Corrective actions can then be implemented to further improve the trainees’ execution by striking the manikin more accurately at recommended hit zones.

Enhanced Live Firing Range System (ELFRAS)

The ELFRAS is the product of a joint collaborative effort between the SPF and the Office of the Chief Science and Technology Officer to enhance the effectiveness of marksmanship training. It utilises multiple sensors that capture and analyse a firer’s performance in relation to various human factors such as weapon handling, breathing, posture and gaze fixation.

The Advanced Performance Enhancement and Analysis Range System (APEARS) software embedded in the sensors will then analyse the data collected and provide real-time recommendations to improve the firer’s performance. The information captured by ELFRAS, along with its automatic scoring feature, will be displayed on a panel beside the officers.
Human-Trailing Dogs

Since 2010, Human-Trailing Dogs (HTDs) have not only helped solve crimes, they were also responsible for locating missing persons. Join Police Life as we find out more about our human-trailing fur pals from the Police K-9 Unit!

Crime Scene K-9s

Just as the term ‘human-trailing’ suggests, HTDs are capable of detecting and locating a person based on the ‘scent article’ left at a crime scene. These ‘scent articles’ refer to personal items such as watches, clothes and pillowcases that have only been used by that person. HTDs can be deployed during crime scene investigations in areas such as Housing and Development Board (HDB) flats, industrial parks and places of interest.

After thoroughly sniffing the ‘scent article’, HTDs will begin the trailing process. The average human body sheds about 40,000 dead skin cells per minute and replenishes them with new ones. These skin cells are too microscopic to be seen by the human eye, but HTDs are able to trail a person based on the individual’s unique odour that lingers on the dead skin cells.

Dawn of the HTDs

HTDs play a pivotal role in policing. Before they become deployable HTDs, the selected K-9 dogs will have to undergo a rigorous training process. Since 2010, the K-9 unit has trained a total of nine dogs with the human-trailing capability, including three retired dogs who served seven years before retiring. A K-9 dog is chosen to be an HTD based on its ability to distinguish specific scents and their ability to retain them. The selected dogs will then undergo a three-month training programme comprised of three phases to test their capabilities:

1. Phase 1
   - Trailing a subject for a distance between 100m and 250m in either rural or urban areas.

2. Phase 2
   - Trailing a subject for a distance between 250m and 400m only in urban areas.

3. Phase 3
   - Trailing a subject for a distance beyond 400m through buildings and urban areas.

After each training session, the K-9 dogs will be rewarded with ball play to keep them motivated. To become operational, the HTD and their handler must complete a practical assessment at the end of the three-month course to assess their ability to trail a person for a distance between 400m and 1km.

Ready to Trail You

For over 30 years, Labrador Retrievers have been used for police work. However, the first HTD in Singapore was not a Labrador Retriever, but was in fact a Bloodhound. Ever since, Labrador Retrievers have been preferred as their short fur is more suited for the local tropical climate. By being better adapted to the local environment, these dogs can work for longer periods of time.

One example of an impeccable Labrador HTD would be the young and inspiring Ole. Due to his excellent sniffing abilities and his drive to trail scents, Ole was selected among several other K-9 dogs to be trained as an HTD.
On 4 November 2016, Ole became an operational HTD with his handler, Station Inspector (SI) Bryan Khoo. “Ole is a confident and cheerful dog who loves to interact with humans,” remarked SI Khoo. Due to its positive characteristics, Ole played a significant role in the search for several individuals.

Some of the cases include:

- Search for a missing person at Little Guilin, Bukit Batok

  Ole led officers to the edge of the quarry, close to the missing person’s belongings. The missing subject was eventually found in the quarry by rescue divers.

- Search for an Absent Without Official Leave person who fled from his home in Choa Chu Kang

  Ole led officers across the road and towards the HDB area. Police Camera (PolCam) footage later revealed that the person had fled via the route identified by Ole.

- Search for a runaway person who ran away from roadblock at Senja Road

  Ole led officers to Blk 624 Senja Road to narrow down the search area. PolCam footage revealed that the person had taken the lift and was eventually arrested at the block.

- Search for a suspect involved in attempted rape at Choa Chu Kang

  HTD Caesar led officers to the 7-11 store at Limbang Shopping Mall. Staff informed that the person fitting the description provided by the officers had gone into the store earlier. This provided a lead for follow-up investigations which led to the person’s arrest.

- Search for a person involved in housebreaking at Lyndhurst Road

  HTD Caesar led officers through Wilkinson Road, Branksome Road, Goodman Road, along Geylang river and finally to a unit at Blk 6 Dakota Crescent. The owner of the unit, who was already under custody of the Police, admitted to the break-in.

- Search for a missing tourist last seen taking a bus from Woodlands Checkpoint

  HTD Xion trailed for a total distance of 1.5 km before he led officers to a missing person at an open car park in Woodlands Centre Road.

Our fur pals have indeed been vital in supporting the SPF’s operations. Alongside their handlers, the HTDs will continue to play a significant role in keeping Singapore safe and secure.
Anchored on trust, the Singapore Police Force (SPF) has been working hand in hand with the community to prevent, deter and detect crime. One such key community partnership is the Citizens on Patrol (COP) volunteer scheme which was first introduced in 1999. Since then, COP members have played a key role in supporting the SPF’s mission of safeguarding Singapore every day!

Empowering the Community

The COP scheme started out with a small group of volunteers as one of the key initiatives under the Community Safety and Security Programme. Over the years, the COP scheme gained more interest from members of the public, enabling them to expand their reach. Singaporeans and Permanent Residents aged between 17 and 80 are eligible to sign up for the scheme.

Besides patrolling the neighbourhoods, COP members also help to raise awareness of crime trends and share crime prevention advisories with fellow residents. In 2018, the COP members expanded their patrols to MRT stations to deter and detect crime.

COP members are also known as the neighbourhoods’ friendly force who extends a helping hand to those in need. As part of the 2016 ‘Forget-Us-Not’ initiative, a joint programme by Lien Foundation and Khoo Teck Puat Hospital, over 80 COP members from Yishun North Neighbourhood Police Centre (NPC) were trained to identify, respond and assist persons with dementia.

Community Heroes

Today, there are more than 3,000 COP members working alongside the SPF. To commemorate the 20th anniversary of COP, a celebration was held at the Singapore Expo, Max Atria on 13 April 2019. Graced by Guest of Honour, Mr Murali Pillai, Member of Parliament, Bukit Batok Constituency and Deputy Chairperson of the Government Parliamentary Committee (Home Affairs and Law), COP members who have actively volunteered in the scheme for at least 10 years were presented with an award to recognise their commitment and contribution to the safety and security of Singapore.

At the event, the rebranding of the COP scheme was also announced. This included the launch of the new COP logo that was designed to represent the tight-knit relationship between the Police and the community in keeping the neighbourhood safe and secure. The rebranding of the scheme also introduced the following measures to enhance the capabilities of COP members:

1. Projecting a stronger presence through enhanced visibility
   To create a stronger brand name for the scheme, all COP members will now don a standardised vest regardless of their jurisdictions. Additionally, they will also carry with them an identification card while patrolling to enhance the ground presence of the SPF.

2. Developing COP members’ operations capabilities through enhanced training
   COP members will receive a more structured training programme to equip them with different skill sets at varying stages of their COP commitments. More than 1,000 members have already been trained under this rebranded scheme.

3. Equipping COP members for improved volunteer experience
   To be rolled out in July 2019, COP members will be provided with an improved volunteer experience through the use of the new volunteering platform in the Police@SG app. The new platform will allow room for improved coordination and tracking of COP patrols in a seamless manner.

Amid the heightened security landscape, COP members play a pivotal role as the eyes and ears on the ground, partnering the Police in keeping vigilant against crimes and security threats in our neighbourhoods. The SPF will continue its efforts to encourage more people to play an active role in safeguarding our community by joining as a COP.

Deputy Assistant Commissioner of Police
Shing Yunn Chinn, Director of Community Partnership Department
Wall of Thoughts

In conjunction with the COP 20th anniversary celebration, Police Life caught up with three COP volunteers who shared their thoughts on joining the scheme.

Valerie Danker, 40 years old, COP volunteer for five years at Sembawang NPC.

Being a COP volunteer has been an eye-opening experience for me. Ever since I started volunteering, I feel more connected to my neighbourhood and have developed a stronger understanding of the problems happening on the ground. With the COP scheme, I believe that everyone can play a part in building a safe and conducive environment for my family, my neighbours and for the children to live in.

Jeremy Tay, 53 years old, COP volunteer for three and a half years at Ang Mo Kio North NPC.

I joined the COP because I wanted to play a part in keeping my neighbourhood safe. Through such community efforts, I hope to do my part in building a safe and conducive environment for my family, my neighbours and for the children to live in.

Erwin Ernady Osman, 36 years old, COP volunteer for five years at Tampines NPC.

Joining the COP has shown me that there are many ways for civilians to contribute to our society. COP has given me a platform to get to know my neighbours better while embracing the kampong spirit. Alongside the Police and other COP volunteers, I am glad to be able to raise awareness on crime and with fellow residents. I believe through such efforts, we are able to build a more prepared and resilient community.

Mums in Blue

A mother’s love is unconditional. No matter how tough the road ahead may be, a mother will always be there to protect her children and give them the utmost care. As part of Police Life’s Mother’s Day feature, I caught up with some of our mums in blue to find out more about how they cope with their family and work commitments.

Tell us more about your family.

I have been married for nine years to a polytechnic lecturer. We have a six-year-old daughter who enjoys swimming and a three-year-old son who loves singing and dancing. Just an interesting fact: my dad is a retired police officer.

How has life changed since having children?

After becoming a mother, I hardly get enough sleep. While I always look forward to seeing my kids and spending time with them after work, I do wish at times that they would go to sleep earlier so that my husband and I could also get our much needed rest. Then again, such occasions are rare as my kids are always full of energy! My mornings are not spared either. On most days, including weekends, my two cheeky monkeys will be climbing all over me before 7 am. Although it can be tiring, being a mother is truly a blessing. It brings me joy seeing my daughter grow up to become a sensible and caring girl, and watching my son singing and dancing to “Baby Shark”.

How do you manage family and work commitments?

Striving for productivity and efficiency is my strategy. Only by doing so can I fulfil my work commitments in time and yet still able to leave work on time to spend time with my family.

I am also very fortunate to have very understanding bosses and colleagues who chip in to help out with my workload when I have to take last-minute leave to care for my children when they fall sick. Two other persons who have played very important roles in helping me to juggle between my work and family are my mum and husband. When my kids were younger, my mum helped me take care of them whenever duty called. My very understanding husband would always plan our family activities around my work schedule as far as possible. As the saying goes, “It takes a village to raise a child”.

What advice do you have for couples considering having children?

Having not one but two children and having them early is probably one of my best life decisions. I had my first child when I was 27 years old and my second at 30 years old. My children will be grown up by the time I retire. Striving for productivity and efficiency is my strategy. Only by doing so can I fulfil my work commitments in time and yet still able to leave work on time to spend time with my family.

For those who plan to have more than one child, it would help to make an effort to share some items with each other such as toys. For those who plan to have more than one child, it would be good for the age gap between siblings to be close so they could share some items with each other such as toys.
Tell us more about your family.
I am happily married for 11 years to a fitness instructor. We have three kids; my eldest daughter is in Primary One, my four-year-old son just entered nursery and my youngest daughter just turned one. I am happy to see my two older children showing interest in sports such as swimming and football. I hope that when the youngest one grows a little older, she will enjoy being physically active like her siblings.

How has life changed since having children?
It has been a challenging journey thus far, especially in terms of managing time and priorities.

I was still doing my part-time studies when I gave birth to my first and second child. I created a timetable to better manage my work commitments, complete school assignments and take care of my children at the same time. Whenever my schedule was extremely packed, I would wake up in the middle of the night to work on my school assignments for a couple of hours and attend to my children when they needed me. Two months after giving birth to my third child, I was selected to attend a six-month residential course, and I would only get to go home on the weekends. It was tough being away from my family, but with the understanding and constant encouragement from my husband and parents, I managed to complete the course successfully.

How do you manage family and work commitments?
Working shift duties for a large part of my career taught me how to strike a better balance between work commitments and family time. During morning shifts, I do not get to spend much time with my kids as I would leave for work before they wake up and only come home when they are already asleep. However, I will make it a point to spend time with them the following day, before my night shift, by taking no more than two hours of nap before my shift. Similarly, after a night shift, I will usually sleep for about an hour or so before waking up to either play with them at home, or take them out for the day.

What advice do you have for couples considering having children?
Having children is a big commitment. You must be prepared mentally and physically to make sacrifices. Time and priority management will be a critical skill to have. Finally, having constant communication with your husband and family to forge a strong understanding between each other will definitely help you to survive the toughest challenges.

Tell us more about your family.
I have been married for 10 years to my first love, who currently serves in the Republic of Singapore Air Force. I have two daughters. The elder one is in Primary three – an absolute diva who loves piano and ballet. My younger daughter who is turning five, on the other hand, is the total opposite of her older sister as she is starting to show interest in playing the drums and picking up taekwondo.

How has life changed since having children?
Children today are very inquisitive. They always ask for explanations when you give them a task to complete. To guide a child effectively, we need to unlearn, reboot and relearn the methods of teaching them. Gone were the days when children would follow their parents’ instructions without questioning. The positive result of this is that it constantly reminds parents that their guidance to them must have a logical reasoning. In gist, it takes a lot of effort, patience and love to have children.

Despite these challenges, children are undoubtedly one’s blessings. Every milestone that they experience in life, be it the growth of their first tooth, or a sports achievement, stays close to my heart. They have taught me to look at life from their perspectives. Even the simplest things or actions bring joy to my life.
Investigating the Murder

Over 2,500 hours’ worth of surveillance footage from various CCTVs and Police Cameras (PolCam) in the neighbourhood were painstakingly reviewed by the investigation officers. This was crucial in helping them piece together what happened, and to trace the suspect’s movements before and after the incident.

Meanwhile, investigation officers on the ground received more information about the incident from Mr Tan, another temple helper. He noticed that a man was acting suspiciously within the temple compound in the evening before the incident happened, and gave a description of the suspect’s attire. The information greatly helped the investigation officers to narrow down the suspect’s movements from the surveillance footage. It was later established that the suspect bought some tools from a hardware shop before heading to a nearby coffeeshop.

The Grisly Discovery

The deceased was discovered in a pool of blood within the compound of the Choa Chu Kang Combined Temple by another temple helper, Mr Tan, when he was starting his morning shift on 14 February 2016, at about 7 am. Shocked and aghast, Mr Tan quickly made his way to a nearby coffeeshop to alert his colleagues who were having breakfast at the time. The Police were contacted and the officers from Jurong Division as well as paramedics from the Singapore Civil Defence Force swiftly arrived at the scene. The paramedics declared the deceased dead at 7.09 am. Investigation officers from the CID’s Special Investigation Section (SIS) took over the management of the scene and began their investigations.

"The first thing we did was to analyse the scene and collect evidence such as blood stains, footprints and loose fibres. Meanwhile, other investigation officers from SIS were tasked to find the temple’s Closed-Circuit Television (CCTV) footage and gather information from members of the public," elaborated Deputy Superintendent of Police (DSP) Zhang Yiwen, the lead investigator.

An autopsy of the deceased later revealed that the injuries were caused by a blunt force, and pointed out that there were also saucer-shaped circular patterns across the external injuries.

The suspect was brought back to his rental unit in Marsiling where the officers found gloves and masks from his previous job as a cleaner. More importantly, the bag used to keep the tools used during the incident was also found at his home. Results collected from a DNA analysis showed that the deceased’s blood and DNA results corresponded with that found on the suspect’s bag and wristwatch. Further investigation of the fibres inside the bag matched the gloves and mask used during the incident. Also, the measurements of the rubber stopper bought by the suspect, to cap the hammerhead, matched perfectly with the saucer-shaped circular patterns on the deceased’s external injuries.

Justice is Served

“The accused testified that he had no intention of killing the deceased. Instead, he explained that he wanted to steal the gold chains on the deities and the money within the donation boxes. During his attempt, the deceased shouted at Loh, startling him. In a fit of panic, Loh attacked the deceased with a blunt object – believed to be a hammer – and ran away,” said DSP Yiwen.

Loh Suan Lit was eventually charged with culpable homicide not amounting to murder. He was sentenced to 12 years’ jail and six strokes of the cane in court on 15 January 2018. Additionally, he was sentenced to another two years of imprisonment for an unrelated offence.
Shahid Afsar, as we bring you into his world of magic.

Life caught up with the Singapore Police Force’s (SPF) very own magician, Special Constable (SC) Shahid Afsar. It takes an enormous amount of effort and dedication to perfect the simplest sleight of hand. Police programmes. He was especially intrigued by how these tricks seemingly defied logic. One moment, the magician would have a ball in his hand and ‘abracadabra!’, a split second later, five balls would magically appear in the same hand!

As a child, SC Shahid was always fascinated by street magic and often found himself glued to such TV programmes. He was especially intrigued by how these tricks seemingly defied logic. One moment, the magician would have a ball in his hand and ‘abracadabra!’, a split second later, five balls would magically appear in the same hand!

Modern-day magicians such as David Blaine and Criss Angel skyrocketed to superstardom not only through mind-boggling magic performances on stage, but also through the simple magic tricks that they perform up close to passers-by on the street. As simple as it may seem, we hardly realise that through mind-boggling magic performances on stage, but also through the simple magic tricks that SC Shahid started participating in his school’s talent competitions and other community events. This caught the attention of one of his teachers in Junior College who then approached him and asked if he was interested to conduct a street magic performance for about 200 people. Although the thought of performing for a large audience for the first time made him nervous, SC Shahid was thrilled to be given this opportunity.

When I first found out how one of the magic tricks was executed, I became excited and I wanted to try it out and show it to my family and friends. But once I began following the steps, I realised how difficult it was to execute it swiftly so that the audience does not notice your sleight of hand,” SC Shahid continued.

Determined to succeed, SC Shahid would return home after school, finish his homework and spend the next few hours refining his magic tricks. More often than not, perfecting these tricks would leave him at the brink of frustration. From dropping objects to messing up the entire magic trick sequence, these challenges at times made SC Shahid doubt his ability to perform the tricks. But with sheer patience and perseverance, he finally managed to overcome all odds to perfect his skills. After months of hard work, SC Shahid succeeded in putting up a flawless magic performance in front of his family. At the end of a simple card trick, he finally got the response that every magician would want to hear from their audience: “How did you do it?”.

“With that kind of reaction, you know that your movements were flawless and what was presented to them was beyond logic. As a magician, that is how we want to impact the audience,” SC Shahid exclaimed.

By the time he was in Junior College, SC Shahid had always been curious to learn a trick or two. It was his family friend who eventually triggered SC Shahid to pick up magic tricks when the former was unwilling to share how it was done. Impressed by the execution of a simple trick, SC Shahid was determined to get to the bottom of it. And that is when he embarked on his learning journey – through watching videos of magic tricks unveiled.

SC Shahid’s goal is to be able to perform at a Las Vegas theatre as he strives to improve his skills. With his unyielding dedication, SC Shahid’s passion for the art of magic continues to burn strong as he strives to improve his skills. With his unyielding dedication, SC Shahid’s goal is to be able to perform at a Las Vegas theatre someday. We wish SC Shahid the best of luck for his pursuit in magic!

Challenges Worth Overcoming

Performing at Police events is really special to me as I get to show the other side of me to my colleagues. It is also very heartening when fellow officers approach me and ask me the golden question – How did you do it?” SC Shahid said.

“One moment, the magician would have a ball in his hand and ‘abracadabra!’, a split second later, five balls would magically appear in the same hand!

Patience is Key

For three years, SC Shahid continued practicing the basic sleights and tricks. As he became more confident of his moves, he began approaching random strangers to perform magic tricks on the streets. However, doing so was not easy as he was often greeted by rejections.

“I remembered approaching a family who was walking along the pavement and asked them for a few minutes to perform my magic tricks. Unfortunately, I was met with rejection. While such moments can be demoralising, it does make me stronger and more determined to continue my pursuit,” shared SC Shahid.

Even though SC Shahid had always been curious to learn a trick or two, it was his family friend who eventually triggered SC Shahid to pick up magic tricks when the former was unwilling to share how it was done. Impressed by the execution of a simple trick, SC Shahid was determined to get to the bottom of it. And that is when he embarked on his learning journey – through watching videos of magic tricks unveiled.

A Crowd of 200

This caught the attention of one of his teachers in Junior College who then approached him and asked if he was interested to conduct a street magic performance for about 200 people. Although the thought of performing for a large audience for the first time made him nervous, SC Shahid was thrilled to be given this opportunity.

“Performing at Police events is really special to me as I get to show the other side of me to my colleagues. It is also very heartening when fellow officers approach me and ask me the golden question – How did you do it?” SC Shahid said.

For three years, SC Shahid continued practicing the basic sleights and tricks. As he became more confident of his moves, he began approaching random strangers to perform magic tricks on the streets. However, doing so was not easy as he was often greeted by rejections.

“I remembered approaching a family who was walking along the pavement and asked them for a few minutes to perform my magic tricks. Unfortunately, I was met with rejection. While such moments can be demoralising, it does make me stronger and more determined to continue my pursuit,” shared SC Shahid.

Another challenge that SC Shahid faces when performing street magic is having to overcome sceptical audience who are always on the lookout for mistakes. Standing at such close proximity, it would have been easy to spot a mistake if SC Shahid did not execute his magic moves well. Once, an audience pointed out...
Have you ever wondered what it feels like to have a twin? Perhaps growing up as a twin would be really fun and thrilling given all those tales about twins’ telepathy and identity swapping. The truth is, we may never know unless we have a twin of our own. In this issue, Police Life caught up with the Singapore Police Force’s (SPF) very own pair of twins, Staff Sergeant (SSgt) Suhairin and SSgt Suhazrin, from the Traffic Police (TP) as we take a peek into their lives, growing up together as twins and how their bond remains unbreakable throughout the years.

Growing Up

11 minutes is all that stands between SSgt Suhairin and SSgt Suhazrin in terms of age. Since young, the twins have always been inseparable, and they have never missed a single birthday celebration together. They also share many similar interests such as football, and have never missed a Manchester United match. They even have very similar food preferences and a mutual dislike for durian.

"Throughout our schooling years, we were in the same class. I think it was great because we managed to spend more time with each other," reminisced SSgt Suhazrin. “We were even in the same music band during our secondary school years and performed together at our prom night. It was definitely one of the many memorable moments we had together,” added SSgt Suhairin.

Many of their peers could not tell them apart due to their uncanny resemblance to each other, and a case of mistaken identity is ever-present in the twins’ lives even to this day.

Fated Together

Joining the SPF was a natural choice for the twins as they were influenced by family members and relatives who served in uniformed organisations. Their uncle was in the SPF’s Police Coast Guard (PCG) and their aunt was in TP. Another person who played a big role in the twins’ decision was their father, an ex-fireman who still serves in the Singapore Civil Defence Force (SCDF). Growing up, the twins always find themselves intrigued by the stories shared by their father and relatives about their work. The tales of the officers’ courage and resilience in carrying out their duties greatly inspired the twins to join the SPF.

Fate continued to bring the twins together even when they least expected it. Upon graduation from the Police Officer Basic Course, the twins were surprised when they received news that they were posted to the same unit!

“Once, when I was reporting for my morning shift, a colleague came to me and asked how I managed to change my uniform so fast! He claimed that he saw me the night before, riding out for my night shift. I had no recollection of ever meeting or knowing this person so I just smiled and left. The officer was simply left stunned and confused. Later, I found out that he was my twin’s new colleague and finally everything made sense,” laughed SSgt Suhairin as he recalled that candid exchange.

Fortunately for them, their girlfriends – now turned wives – managed to distinguish them with ease.

Keeping the Bond Alive

Despite their varying work schedules, the twins always make it a point to spend time with each other, on top of spending time with their own families. This includes organising sleepovers at each other’s homes or going on family vacations together.

“My sister-in-law said that my relationship with my brother is like a phone and a charger. When we meet, we talk as if nobody is around us and if we do not meet for a long time, our “batteries” grow weak. Thankfully, our spouses are very understanding when it comes to our relationship," chuckled SSgt Suhazrin.

The communication between the twins is essential for their professional growth since they both get to share and learn from each other’s experiences. Such exchanges also help them to better prepare for the unique situations that they may face on the job as TP officers, patrolling their individual sectors.

Staying Committed

The twins are each other’s pillar of strength. They will always remind each other to think positively and to do their job sincerely. Be it in school or at work, the twins have always supported each other through thick and thin.

“As TP officers, we remain committed to ensuring that our roads remain safe. That is our priority. At the end of the day, we all want to get home to our family safe and sound. So, remember to ride safe, and ride home safely," affirmed SSgt Suhairin.
Currently the oldest band in Singapore, the Singapore Police Force (SPF) Band has won numerous accolades both at home and abroad. Rooted in its mission to promote the SPF brand through its music and performances, the SPF band never fails to impress its audience with their innovative renditions of a wide repertoire of music.

Curious to find out what constantly fuels their passion, Police Life caught up with two SPF Band musicians to find out more about their experiences.

Station Inspector Mohamad Zulkiffli Bin Selamat

Team Leader (Woodwind Section) and Concert Master, SPF Band

Instruments: Trombone, Flute, Recorder, Bagpipes

What sparked your interest in music?

It all started when I was in secondary school. I played the trombone in the school band and there was a strong camaraderie amongst the band members. We treated each practice like the real deal and our band conductor expected nothing less even during sectionals. Grounded in our school motto “Potest Qui Vult” which means “He who wills, can”, we would always give our best during school performances and competitions such as the Singapore Youth Festival. I like how music brings people together and more importantly, how it instills discipline in me.

How did you join the SPF Band?

One of my secondary school seniors encouraged me to join the SPF Band while I was serving in the Police Coast Guard. Coincidentally, I was approached by the SPF Band to attend an audition after they saw my flute performance during the Police Coast Guard Family Day Carnival. I passed the audition and joined the SPF Band in 2009.

What is your most memorable moment as an SPF Band musician?

There have been many cherished memories. If I had to pick one, it would be my first overseas performance. We were in Hokkaido, Japan for the World Police Band Concert. Apart from that once-in-a-lifetime experience, I felt extremely proud to promote the SPF brand through our music and receive compliments from people who watched our performance for the first time.

Deputy Team Leader (Women Police Pipes and Drums), Chief Musician, SPF Band

Roles: Bagpipes, Singer, Dancer

What sparked your interest in music?

I developed a strong interest in music as a child. From the age of five, my parents exposed me to different genres of music including classical, pop, rock and jazz. I especially enjoyed the tunes of Nat King Cole, Frank Sinatra, Dionne Warwick, and music from the classic Motown Records. I decided to pursue singing as my love for music grew with every melody I heard. I was never shy growing up. Back in those days when we were still living in the kampung, I would randomly sing and perform for my friends. I am glad and blessed to be able to live my dream as I am able to join like-minded music enthusiasts in the SPF Band.

How did you join the SPF Band?

During my basic police training stint, I won a singing competition that was held for the trainees at the Old Police Academy and was talent-scouted to join the SPF Band. Prior to that, I had no formal musical training nor could I play any instruments. After joining the SPF Band, I slowly learnt the ropes of playing the bagpipes and became the resident singer for the SPF Band. Picking up a new instrument was not a walk in the park, especially since I did not have prior music training. Nonetheless, I was determined to perfect this skill. I would practise for at least two hours each day in addition to the training that I received. When needed, I brought my personal electronic chanter home to practise and memorise songs. I would also make sure to arrive early before any training and practice sessions to ensure that I am prepared to perform my parts.

What is your most memorable moment as an SPF Band musician?

The most memorable moment for me was the performance in Brunei alongside the SPF Combo Band back in 2008. This performance was a special one as were invited to perform for the Sultan of Brunei’s Birthday Celebration and I managed to successfully sing a challenging opera song titled ‘Nessun Dorma’. It gave me a great sense of satisfaction and honour to represent the SPF at such a high-profile event through our music.

Any advice to share with aspiring police officers or musicians who wish to join the SPF Band?

As long as you have the passion and are looking for more excitement on top of your policing duties, go for it! You will never know what other musical talents you actually have till you try.
